FAMILY LITERACY COMPONENT

Recruitment is planned, comprehensive, and successful.

Parents and children have multiple, guided opportunities to solve problems.

Program activities support and encourage home-school involvement.

Educational experiences are based on parents’ goals, children’s choices, and family interests.

Education for parents, children, and families accommodates a range of learner levels and stresses knowledge and skills needed for daily life.

The overall administration of the program supports program goals (e.g., use of staff time, choosing staff, planning time, materials, integration and collaboration with other family-oriented programs in community).

Families participate in programs long enough to meet their goals. In addition to making referrals, program staff facilitate family members’ transitions into other educational or employment institutions/organizations.

SECTION 3: OPEN-ENDED RESPONSE

The 3 most pressing family literacy professional/staff development needs in my program are:
